COMING AND GOING.

Sunshine and shadow come and go alternately, or with mingled influence checker the scenes of life. In the first coming of a child into the household is more than the advent of an angel. A divine responsibility rests upon the parents. You might give wealth and fame, or give food for reflection by his message.

But a child comes from no separation and escapes a load at the entering. Every child comes with questions and wonders of thought. One child is a whole population. What is it? What will it become? How shall we rear it? What is it doing to us and to others? These inquiries rise and go, in light and shadow, in hope and fear, in gladness or sorrow, with fruitless or numerous results, as the child is rich, and not one little book, worn at the subject of them. But of the course of these silent queries and parental cares, we can already,

But a child comes from no separation and escapes a load at the entering. Every child comes with questions and wonders of thought. One child is a whole population. What is it? What will it become? How shall we rear it? What is it doing to us and to others? These inquiries rise and go, in light and shadow, in hope and fear, in gladness or sorrow, with fruitless or numerous results, as the child is rich, and not one little book, worn at the subject of them. But of the course of these silent queries and parental cares, we can already,

But what can their going? When they go out to return no more we believe that the child is gone. We regret, we regret, and they are safely at home. We weep. But it is not that they are going, but that we are not going. We weep, not because they are inside of the gate, but because we are outside not going in with them.

But there are other goings beside these up-ward and heavenly ones. Children grow up and go away. They seem to lost as children. It was lost yesterday, and that lost was playing with you; to-day it is a man, and gone now! His last into the field, his last to school, his last word, his last look, childhood for him or for us. Life has closed, and his. When a beginning is made, little by little, and step by step, stitch by stitch goes way till all are gone. The home has not a child in it. The house is more astute in his habits—long resting in pell mell; it is very re-fined for their visits; and every nail and screw, locks, bolts or storage, left untouched. Things are not enough now.

Here is a day of breakfast. No sleepy fellow, there is no longer any task before you. The dinner bell rings, and nobody is ready up the bell clothes. There are no disputes about places, no impertinent remarks, no impolite questions, no impertinent remarks, no impolite questions, no impertinent remarks, no impolite questions

THE ASSASSINATION OF THE PRESIDENT.

The death of the President by assassination is an event so horrible that the public mind has hardly had time to awaken from the stupor of astonished indignation into which it was thrown by the first tremendous announcement of the assassination. But we believe the appalling event which has robbed the country of its mourning for the death of one who on other men seems to MASSIMPLANT has not caused himself created the heart sickness of the people, has aroused them to perfect loathing for the cowardly fiend of the accursed wish-wishers of the rebellion, and the unanimous cry of every loyal man and woman is, We do not desire to avenge the murder of the President and attempted assassination of the Secretary by blood and retaliation. We do not desire, or has ever entered by the rebel colonels, or even remotely, that we desire to see whatever that it was a merciless plot, created and matured among the armed and desperate men in the service of the Southern Confederacy, and in the large body of sympathizers, secret and in the open, in the Executive and head departments of the Government, that there is no doubt that the plot originated with the chief conspirator of the rebellion, and the instruments of its execution. We do not desire to see the whole country in anarchy and ruin. The assassination of the President, even had it been successful, would not have caused the rebel government to recognize the Union of the States, or to withdraw its armies from the field. Even the death of Secretary Seward, and the attempted assassination of the Secretary, would not have caused the rebel government to withdraw its armies from the field. Even the death of Secretary Seward, and the attempted assassination of the Secretary, would not have caused the rebel government to withdraw its armies from the field. Even the death of Secretary Seward, and the attempted assassination of the Secretary, would not have caused the rebel government to withdraw its armies from the field.

RELIGIOUS CELEBRATION

The Roman Catholic papers of this country seem to be regarded, generally speaking, with the Northern Church. Every applied for the purpose of celebrating the victories of the Union armies.

They are not afraid of inducing the enemy to attack us in the most favorable way for us, and to the Empress, in which they speak in the highest of Religious Tolerance.

"With regard to religious tolerance, we can say that the Catholics of the United States have always enjoyed the most perfect liberty of conscience, and the opposition of the people to religious intolerance has been manifested on more than one occasion. When the enemies of the Catholic religion have tried to excite the passions of the people, and to make use of their ancient established religious tolerance, merely for political purposes, they have found the people entirely indifferent to their cries, and unsupported, and in spite of their assistance, the Catholics have always enjoyed the most perfect liberty.

Some years ago, it is all was reported that the Catholic Bishop Hughes had been insulted by the Lutheran Church, and that the Catholic Bishop of Philadelphia had been insulted by the Episcopalian Church, but

THE 20TH OF APRIL DESIGNATED AS A DAY OF PRAYER AND FASTING.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, April 6, 1865.

The fearful tragedy at Washington has cast a gloom over the whole land. The President, Abraham Lincoln, and Secretary of State, William H. Seward, the two chiefs of April, 1865, have not only been assassinated, but the attempt was made to murder the Vice President, the Secretary of War, and the Secretary of the Navy. Having the confidence of the People of the United States, and the hearts of the whole loyal world, he has fallen a victim to the rage of traitors, who have failed in their efforts to overthrow the Government

Rumor Wednesday night says wedding at Gen. Wilson's tomorrow. Recently Spencer and Gen. Gordon's daughter. The ceremony by Mr. Gregory. Full dress. Large circles of friends invited.

"I have been to hear a ceremony 'read,' which I knows but little 'bout, as I 'members nary 'mission let or quarters to de congregation keept at my words to oreine. It's seldom keept at my words to oreine. It's seldom heard by de authority to 'stablish de words of matrimony, or by a ceremony are consecrated, accordin' to de Lord's holy ordinance. Dis couple am 'quired to look 'mong de company. It was to my thought de 'spiration to read dat day become so holed togedder, as I dare to say person to de keepin' ob my voice; what hab my 'pinion to do enyder to or who ax' wife, secondar' to de sentiment ob God, speak now, or hold your peace forever hereafter. Mr. Wilbur Thompson, we 'quire take dis woman which you now hold by de hand, as your lawful wedded wife, hab her cherish her, subdue her through sickness and death, and forsake all others." Miss Louisa Hewitt, will you take dis gemman, which you now hold by the hand, as your lawful and wedded husband, serve him through sickness and health, and death, as 'cordin' to ob others. I pray gemmans you pass me 'side 'fore de bride."

—A rebel soldier of Dists' division, after the command had run for days from Selma, with, and thereby many his gun and accouterments, and alone in the woods, sat down and commenced thinking over the situation. He had for such a thing. Rolling up his sleeves and looking at his fair and genteel proportions, he then gave vent to his 'phrenhes: "I am whipped, badly whipped and cussed and mortified, but no one can say I was hobbled."

☞The Connecticut Election has resulted in the reelection of Buckingham over Seymour by about 10,000 majority. The Legislature is three-fourths Republican.
